HEALTHY CRUISING

At P&O Cruises health, safety and well-being of our valued guests, the communities we visit and our loyal crew is a top priority.

Our health and safety practices have always been of the highest standard. As our understanding of COVID-19 is still evolving, we are working closely with some of the best minds in medical science, public health and infectious disease control to understand the challenges posed by the virus and how to best mitigate its spread.

When we resume cruising it will be with enhanced health measures, developed in conjunction with government health authorities, public health experts, local ports and the Cruise Lines International Association. As the world re-opens social venues, we will continue to learn from their example and adjust our health and safety practices accordingly.

Some of the new safety measures we're considering are below.
